

Hi Wayne

I'm a swinging voter. I have voted across the spectrum. I am listening to you now about tomorrow's meeting on tax. Here is a thought for you to consider.

Rather than meet with people and organisations, that have already provided their views to the Henry Tax review, why not use technology via the census/electoral data base to select random ordinary people to provide their views and give you and the Government feedback. We are not all brain dead!

Using your local member to provide a view is in theory a reasonable approach, but in reality not very effective. Why not be creative and step outside the box and seek the views of people like me and others on these very important issues.

O by the way, I'm not grumpy about having to pay tax. Its my responsibility as an Australian. (Small business operator)

I don't expect a response but I thought I'd at least let you know my views.

Regards

Mike O'Mara
